

Filling last-minute openings

Lena and Carla find cancellations in Square, scan a spreadsheet, and chase replies by text. Contact history can slip through the gaps.

TODAY

3 in 10

cancellations refilled

LENA'S GOAL

At least 5 in 10

with fewer staff follow-ups

Lena reported the baseline and target. The prototype has not measured an improvement.

One opening, one offer at a time

01 Staff adds an opening

Enter the service, stylist, date and time.

02 The next eligible client gets an offer

Match service, availability and required stylist.
Contact the earliest waitlist entry first.

03 The client accepts, declines or waits

A private phone link needs no account. Decline or no reply advances to the next eligible client.

04 Acceptance fills the opening

Only the current offer can claim it.
The front desk then updates Square.

15

minutes to respond

The deadline ends sooner
if the appointment starts.

The sample demo uses
30 seconds so you can watch it move on.

Clients reply. Staff stays in control.

The staff view shows the current client, deadline, previous responses and remaining candidates.

Cancel an offer or the whole opening

Cancel one offer to contact the next client.
Cancel the opening to stop all outreach.

Reopen or handle a delivery problem

Reopen a filled appointment to continue the queue.
A delivery failure pauses outreach for staff action.

Temporal preserves progress and deadlines.
After a service restart, the process resumes.

Actual prototype
Fictional client

Prototype boundaries

The process works locally. Real client outreach needs additional work.

WORKING NOW

Automatic matching and durable response deadlines

Private accept or decline links and protection against late claims

Staff history, cancellation, reopening and delivery recovery controls

Unfilled or stopped status with a clear reason

SIMULATED OR EXCLUDED

Texts use a demo inbox.
Sample clients are fictional.

No Square or Google Sheets connection.
Staff enters openings and updates Square.

No staff login or checks for conflicts across openings and the real calendar.

No live refill-rate evidence yet.
The 50% target remains a goal.

A walkthrough with Lena and Carla

Proposed next step: a 30-minute review using sample openings.

30 minutes together

Confirm that the front desk can leave it running and still know what happened.

First: review the staff and client experience

Try no reply, acceptance, cancellation or reopening, and a delivery problem. Confirm wording and rules.

Then: plan a small live pilot

Add real messaging and consent, staff access, and checks against calendar conflicts first.

Pilot measures: cancellations refilled, staff follow-ups and delivery failures.